I found an awesome book in the library that's all about explorers. Have a read of this...

This page tells the reader some of the difficulties in being an explorer. Imagine that you are trying to travel around the taiga belt – it sounds really hard! I think I'm too much of a wimp to cope with it. What sort of an explorer would you be? Would you find it hard, like me, or would all the challenges that are mentioned be no problem for you?

Activity one

Today's first task is about the power of three. You need to give three examples from the text for each question.

1. Name three places mentioned in the 'Climb an unclimbed' monster section.
2. List three challenges you may encounter if you circumnavigate the taiga belt.

Activity two

Draw yourself as an explorer tackling an unclimbed mountain or circumnavigating the taiga. Label the clothing and equipment you'd need to overcome the challenges you may face.
